Take a moment this Thanksgiving to be grateful for the good things in life

As I drive through the countryside, I see so many things to be thankful for, the large red and green equipment harvesting the bounty of crops for sale and feed, the evidence of all the moisture that came at the end of the season, the neatly groomed farmsteads with the security lights shining in the night.

We at Lake Region Electric are so thankful for our cooperative family: you, the member-owners and our cooperative employees.

I implore you to take a few minutes to take a look back on this past year and think of all the things that we can be grateful for.

Have a Great Thanksgiving Season!

God Bless,

Timothy McIntyre

*A lifetime of service to co-op
members: Co-op leaders recognized at SDAC Hall of Fame banquet*

Former Lake Region Electric Board Member Paul Symens (center) is congratulated by Board President Kermit Pearson and General Manager Tim McIntyre.

Paul Symens has been dedicated to serving cooperatives for decades. He was recognized as a 2021 inductee at the ceremony held in Watertown Sept. 22.

Symens served on the board at Lake Region Electric in Webster before he was elected to the state Legislature in 1987 and again in 1996. In addition to his service at LREA, he was a board member for Farmers Union Marketing and Processing for 36 years.

"I've put in a lot of time with cooperatives and I know how co-ops work. I was raised in co-ops and it has been a pleasure to be a part of that process. The magic of co-ops is people working together to help each other, and as long as board and management do their jobs, it's going to be successful."

Symens said his advice for the younger generation of co-op leaders would be to learn about the history of cooperatives, how they were founded and why they exist.

"Learning from history will teach you a lot and keep you from making mistakes," he said.

A house full of Thanksgiving safety

Nearly every household uses extra electricity during the holidays - for cooking, decorating and heating. Take extra care to use electricity safely and to ask family members and house-guests to do the same. Here are some tips:

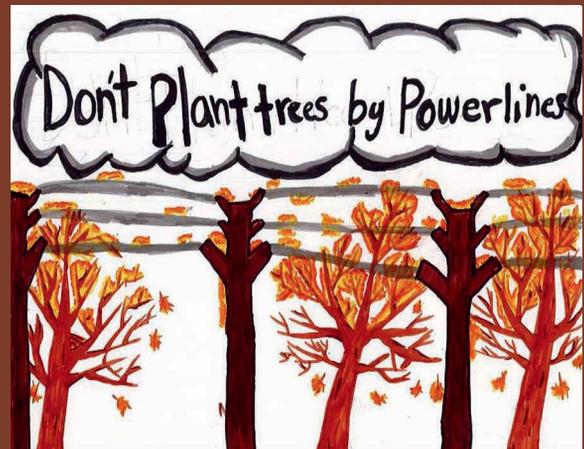

- Stay in the kitchen when broiling or doing any stovetop cooking.
- Keep children well away from cooking appliances while the appliances are in use.
- Keep towels, potholders and curtains away from hot surfaces in your kitchen.
- One of the riskiest holiday behaviors is overloading your electrical outlets. You will overload your wall outlets if you string strand after strand of holiday lights together and plug them into an extension cord that you plug into an outlet.
- Plugging multiple strands of cords into a power strip does not add any juice to the electrical circuit that powers the outlet you plug the strip into.
- Check decorative lights for damaged cords, plugs and sockets. Replace anything that's frayed, cracked or broken. Buy cords that are certified by UL; look for the UL symbol on the package.
- Don't run extension cords under rugs, carpets or baseboards, or anywhere they can be a tripping hazard.
- Only use decorations and cords outdoors that are properly rated for outdoor use.
- When you put up outdoor decorations, do not string lights in trees near power lines. Fasten outdoor lights carefully and securely with clips, never nails or tacks.
- Keep electric lights away from decorative metal trees.
- Keep all light strings and other decorations away from pets so they don't get tangled in them or chew the wires.
- Keep all decorations - and everything else - at least three feet away from heat sources such as fireplaces and space heaters.
- Always turn off your decorations when you leave home and when you're sleeping.
- Make sure smoke detectors are present and working properly.
- Use space heaters properly and safely. Keep them out of high-traffic areas and at least three feet from anything that can burn.
- Do not leave a space heater running unattended. Turn off space heaters and unplug them when you leave the room or go to sleep.
- Never leave an open flame, including your fireplace or a candle, unattended.

FEEDING SOUTH DAKOTA

Hunger relief program takes on the task of making sure families have food on the table

Billy Gibson

billy.gibson@sdrea.coop

Putting an end to hunger in the state of South Dakota is a very tall order. But it's one that leaves Lori Dykstra decidedly undaunted.

Dykstra is CEO of Feeding South Dakota, a non-profit hunger relief organization with outposts all across the state dedicated to providing access to nutritious meals for those in need.

She and her team are driven not only to deliver quality meals to the young and old alike but in a broader sense to contribute to the economic, social and emotional health of families and the communities they call home.

Each week, Feeding South Dakota uses its network of agencies and partners to distribute roughly 200,000 meals, including 5,000 packages of food provided to children through the organization's BackPack program and 2,700 food boxes for seniors.

While it may not be readily apparent to some, Dykstra points out that South Dakota has four of the 10 poorest counties in the country, and the rural nature of the state causes the creation of food deserts where grocery stores, markets and other resources can be separated by many miles. Nearly 15 percent of the population lives at or below the poverty line and more than 40 percent of school-aged children qualify for free and reduced meals.

Dykstra believes no family should face the decision of buying food or buying medication or paying rent.

"I'm excited to work toward meeting the needs of those who face hunger in South Dakota and grateful for the opportunity to share my passion for community service," she said.

The program began in 1975 when the Sioux Falls Ministerial Association formed a community food pantry. Eight years later, the Black Hills Regional Food Bank, Inc., was created.

Eventually, in 2004 an inevitable joining of forces took place when the two separate organizations merged and became the Community Food Banks of South Dakota, Inc., bringing together 45 years of experience in providing hunger relief.

The program is continuing to look for new ways to meet its mission. In July, Feeding South Dakota launched Heroes for the Hungry: A Campaign for Monthly Giving, as an effort to re-energize the spirit of giving after the height of the pandemic and encourage regular monthly donations.

The United Methodist Church Dakotas Conference pitched in with a Miracle Offering in which the first 120 monthly donations would be matched up to a total of $12,000.

"This is a wonderful opportunity to strengthen our foundation of sustaining gifts that allow us to do our important work," Dykstra said.

State Veterans Cemetery in Sioux Falls opens new options for military families

Billy Gibson

billy.gibson@sdrea.coop

A dozen distraught family members surrounded the casket conspicuously draped with a bright, crisp American flag. The brilliant hues of red, white and blue stood in stark contrast to the slate gray sky hanging overhead and the slight chill that filled the air.

As the gathered mourners paid their last respects and turned back toward the administration building at the South Dakota Veterans Cemetery, the clouds suddenly burst open and a heavy rain began to fall.

“Well, your daddy was a rancher,” the grieving widow said to her son as they made their way down the hillside. “A good rain is exactly what he would have wanted. This would have made him smile.”

Erin Brown is director of the South Dakota Veterans Cemetery (SDVC) located northeast of Sioux Falls and she often hears stories that family members share about their loved ones who arrive at their final resting place there. A military veteran herself, Brown said those stories bring added meaning and significance to her work.

“The veterans – and their families – are very important to us,” she said. “When I hear those kinds of stories and hear them describe a lifetime of memories and all the good times they had together, it reinforces the idea that there’s real value in what we’re doing here at the cemetery.”

The SDVC is the first federally funded, state-owned and operated veterans cemetery in the state, although there is no residency requirement for military veterans to be interred there. The Black Hills National Cemetery is located a few miles east of Sturgis.

The facility is located on 60 acres donated by the City of Sioux Falls and ultimately will have enough space for over 28,000 casket grave sites, cremation grave sites, a columbarium for cremated remains and a scattering garden. More than 600 in-ground crypts have already been installed. The facility was made possible by more than $7 million in federal money, state funds and private donations.

Since the ribbon-cutting ceremony last Memorial Day, the cemetery has seen a steady stream of burials. There were four on a recent Friday.

SDVC staff works with the families to arrange details of the burial services which typically include a final pre-service consultation with the families, a processional to the committal shelter, a 15-20 minute service, folding and presentation of the flag, and a rifle salute and Taps presented by local military-related volunteer organizations.

Members of the grounds crew are all veterans and can relate to military families in their time of grief.

Clarence Kooistra is one of those volunteers who donates his time to make sure veterans receive a proper burial and their families receive the proper respect. He's a member of the VFW Post 628 Honor Guard based in Sioux Falls.

"I just feel it's very important that these men and women are treated with the respect they deserve for the sacrifices they've made to preserve our freedoms and democracy in our country," Kooistra said. "It's a privilege for me to come out here and do this for the families."

While construction commenced on the cemetery two years ago, it took several years to bring the project to fruition. At the time the first federal grant application was submitted in 2017, Brown was serving as a veterans program manager in the State Department of Veteran's Affairs helping veterans navigate through the federal bureaucracy to receive their rightful benefits. She often found, however, that some of the former soldiers would balk at the benefits "so that someone they felt needed it more than them could get it."

When the cemetery director position opened up, she jumped at the chance to find another way to help veterans.

In performing her job, Brown calls on her own military experience, which includes joining the Minnesota National Guard in high school and receiving advanced individual training at Fort Lee in Virginia. She returned and attended college for three years before getting deployed to Iraq for nearly two years.

She worked in supply management at a Marine base between Ramadi and Fallujah and eventually left the service as an E-5.

When she and her staff are interacting with veterans and their families, they have little difficulty relating to them on a personal basis.

"The military is the kind of experience that you don't know you want or need until you have it," she said. "All of those experiences have put me into one of the most rewarding jobs I've been able to do. Without it, I wouldn't be able to relate to the families and get the help they need and have earned. Once they realize I'm also a veteran, things change and they see me differently."

Brown and her staff - all of whom are veterans themselves - have developed personal relationships with the families whose loved ones are interred at the facility. During their visits to the cemetery, family members often express their gratitude to the staff for their work in keeping the facility well maintained and give updates on how the family is faring and if they have any further needs.

Brown said she is looking toward the future with optimism for the

Electrical power remains an affordable service and a great value

This year, Lake Region Electric Association celebrated its 80th year as a cooperative serving the members of Day, Marshall and parts of Roberts County in Northeast South Dakota. Originally, there was interest in serving some parts of Brown and Spink Counties as well, however the boundaries that were settled upon in 1945 are still in place today.

Lake Region Electric started out in 1941 but the first 180 miles of line were not energized until October of 1946. There were legal battles at the onset, as well as buy-in from some of the farmers. Also, the World War II halted construction, as materials were difficult to come by!

The world has changed drastically in the past 80 years. We rely on electricity for almost every aspect of our lives. Back in 1941, farmers were still recovering from the drought and depression. Some farmers had to be convinced that the cost for electricity wasn't actually an additional expense, rather it would replace other expenses, like fuel. The requirement of a minimum charge for 40 kilowatts of energy seemed excessive to some. At the first meetings some farmers expressed concern over using "that much" electricity.

We supply energy to more than 3,400 meters, or about 2,600 members. Many members have more than one meter powering their homes and farms. Originally, members paid about $5 per month, plus the cost of their electrical usage. In 1941, the cost per kilowatt hour was about $.09.

Today, the cost per kWh hasn't changed much; though there have been times in between where the cost was significantly lower, the cost per kWh in 1971 was only 2.4 cents. Members of Lake Region Electric currently pay an average of 10 cents per kilowatt hour for home and commercial use, with heat rates costing about half that.

Base rates now average between $45 and $100 per month, depending on the service. This increase is due to higher materials and maintenance costs; everyone's favorite word, "inflation." The staff at Lake Region Electric Association and Board of Directors work diligently to operate smoothly and keep the cooperative in a good financial position so that rates can remain stable.

Members look at their electric bill sometimes and think, "Wow, that's high!" Other than the reasonable base charge, the cost of your electric bill is literally based on how much electricity you use in our homes and businesses. And, wow, do we use a lot! There is no way in those early days the pioneers of Lake Region Electric could have conceived that on average, farms and homes would be using over 2,500 kWh of electricity per month!

As a society, we have become accustomed to being able to have electricity on demand, and we need it.

Member-owners of Lake Region Electric Association used roughly 8 MILLION kWh of electricity per month in 2020. As a society, we have become accustomed to being able to have electricity on demand, and we need it.

Board member Tom Steiner recently commented that there was bad weather predicted and while he was preparing to make sure there was a heat source and power for things like freezers, the grandkids started panicking and making comments like, "How am I going to charge my phone?" While we may chuckle about this, powering electronic devices is a very real concern for the younger generations. We have become very reliant on communication and electricity is all but invaluable!

You hear us say often how important it was to bring power to the rural farms and communities 80 years ago, but it is even more important that we continue to work together as a cooperative to continue to honor our mission statement: "To provide the highest quality services and products to its members while maintaining competitive rates."

Got Water?

Winter is fast approaching! Now is a good time to check to see if your cattle waterers are in perfect working condition. Verify that you have voltage and correctly operating elements and thermostats at each waterer. Finding and correcting any problems now is much easier than finding out the hard way once it gets cold!

THE FIRST TO ACT

The state's emergency medical services workforce declined 30 percent last year, though some are still eager to serve.

The early morning fog had already settled in heavy and thick as a damp blanket when Joey Denison pulled out of his driveway in Lake Norden. He was headed to Lake Preston for his job as an electric lineman and just happened to be fresh off earning his paramedic license in his spare time.

Within just a few minutes of driving along Hwy. 81, the blurry image of a wrecked semi came into view through the haze. The rig was overturned and rested across the roadway. At first blush, the scene appeared to be a one-vehicle accident, but Denison soon saw the small pickup that was crushed beneath the trailer.

When he got close enough to peer inside the vehicle, he saw a young woman who had clearly sustained severe damage to her skull. His four years of training through EMT and paramedic school kicked into high gear.

"There were cars still running into the semi from the other side so I positioned my truck where no one could run into her car," Denison recalled. "Then I pulled her car out from underneath the trailer with my truck. I could see her head was shattered and someone had already called 911 to report that she was dead. Eventually, we were able to get her out with the Jaws of Life and transport her to the hospital in Madison."

The young lady made a full recovery and she and Denison still stay in contact three years later.

Denison doesn't characterize his actions as heroic; he sees his response as something that neighbors and citizens simply do for one another. Spurred on by his passion for helping others, Denison began his EMT training seven years ago and now volunteers his services in Lake Norden and the surrounding area.

"I always kind of regretted not going into the military, so this is my way of being a community servant," he said.

These days he teaches classes in emergency training and notes a shortage of qualified volunteers to staff rural first responder operations.

According to the South Dakota Department of Health, over the past year the active EMS workforce has declined 30 percent.

Denison said assumptions sometimes depart from reality when it comes to EMS work, and he encourages those who have a penchant for serving others to consider first responder training.

Joey Denison says emergency response work is both challenging and rewarding.

"The physical act of rendering first aid is a lot of repetitive training and muscle memory, but people think it's too complex. If you can catch a baseball, you can put your hand over a cut. It's not that hard," he said. "We can't be afraid to help someone in need in an emergency situation. Someday it could be you who needs the help."

A LIFETIME OF CO-OP SERVICE TO MEMBERS

Co-op leaders recognized at SDAC Hall of Fame banquet

Harry Thomas still remembers turning on the “power switch” for the first time at his home when he was a youngster.

That was made possible by his local electric cooperative, and for Thomas it was a life lesson about the great things that can happen through co-op organizations. He went on to serve for nearly four decades on the board of Venture Communications and was one of four recent inductees into the South Dakota Association of Cooperatives Hall of Fame.

Thomas and Paul Symens were recognized as 2021 inductees at the ceremony held in Watertown Sept. 22, while Chuck Birkholt and Dan Lindblom were honored as 2020 inductees. Last year’s banquet was canceled due to the pandemic.

“I’ve been around cooperative systems all my life,” Thomas said. “I remember when the co-op brought power to the farm and when Sully Buttes built the first telephone line out there. Those things would not have happened if not for cooperatives. The Bell companies built in the towns, but they had no interest in going into the country.”

Symens served on the board at Lake Region Electric in Webster before he was elected to the state Legislature in 1987 and again in 1996. He was a board member for Farmers Union Marketing and Processing for 36 years.

“I’ve put in a lot of time with cooperatives and I know how co-ops work. I was raised in co-ops and it has been a pleasure to be a part of that process. The magic of co-ops is people working together to help each other, and as long as board and management do their jobs, it’s going to be successful.”

Symens said his advice for the younger generation of co-op leaders would be to learn about the history of cooperatives, how they were founded and why they exist.

“Learning from history will teach you a lot and keep you from making mistakes,” he said.

Birkholt started his cooperative career as a laborer at Cam Wal Electric in Selby. He went to work “digging holes and setting poles” for 85 cents an hour until he discovered he could make more money as a lineman.

He worked at the co-op for 45 years, the last eight as general manager. He went on to serve on the board at Venture Communications for the past 21 years.

“I told my wife I always wanted to see what it was like on the other side of the board table,” he said. “But I think she just wanted me out of the house.”

Lindblom, a long-time board member at Black Hills Electric in Custer, was unable to attend the banquet.

HUNTING FOR THE HUNGRY

Sportsmen Against Hunger is nearing one million pounds of game meat donated to food banks across the state since 1993.

South Dakota hunters donate game meat for families in need through Sportsmen Against Hunger program

One million pounds of meat is an awful lot of protein...and a lot of goose burgers.

The organization Sportsmen Against Hunger is closing in on one million pounds of wild game donated to the needy since the program was founded in 1993 by Dr. Jeff Olson and Dr. Tom Kafka.

For nearly three decades, generous hunters throughout the state have given away a variety of game meat including deer, antelope, elk, pheasant, grouse and geese.

According to Olson, the goose meat has been quite a hit.

“Apparently, there are a lot of people who like to eat goose burgers,” he said. “It may not sound too appetizing when you think about it, but it’s not bad and a lot of the people who receive our donations say it’s great. They’ve developed quite a taste for it.”

Olson recalls that even when he launched the program he was completely oblivious to how many people in the state were going to bed hungry every night.

“We’re reaching one million pounds of meat our hunters and processors have donated over the years, but there are so many who are food insecure in our state that we could use another several million and still not meet the need,” he said.

Olson is accustomed to working around a maze of regulations, restrictions and prohibitions, noting “there’s a new and different hurdle we have to jump every year.”

Presently, the program is facing the challenge of finding enough plants to process the donated animals. Just a few years ago, there were nearly 50 wild game processors on the list of licensed receiving plants. Today there are just 14.

Olson cites pandemic-related problems in the industry and a dearth of available workers. The plants have been forced to take domestic animals for production and push donated wild game to the back of the line.

Ron Fowler has served as field director for the program since 2005 when he retired from South Dakota Game, Fish and Parks as a game management specialist after 35 years. He works out the details of the operation, recruits processors and hunters to participate and sorts through the red tape of state and federal regulations, health precautions, quality control and the program’s certification system.

He explained that when a hunter decides to donate a doe deer or antelope, they fill out a certificate and deliver it to any processor in the state that's on the prearranged receiving list. The certificate covers $75 of the processing fee while the hunter is responsible for any balance, though some facilities will accept the certificate as full payment. In the case of bucks, the hunter is responsible for the entire balance, which could run to more than $100. Processors collect the certificates and turn them in at the end of the season for payment.

Fowler said the policy is in place to help control and manage the state's deer population. He said some hunters will obtain more than one deer license, keep one for themselves and donate the others.

"When the program started, we had no funds to cover any of the hunter's cost, but then we created a foundation and now we can pay for does, plus we provide the casing for processors and pay for the cost of getting the meat to the food banks where it's distributed to those who need it."

Fowler said these days most donated venison is coming from deer taken within, or close to, city limits. Several larger cities and towns have allowed deer to be taken in close proximity of their borders simply to hold the deer population down and keep them out of yards, gardens and streets. The cost of processing those animals is typically shared with the local government.

Sportsmen Against Hunger is also seeing more anglers getting in on the action. More than 300 lbs. of cleaned walleye has been donated in the past year. At this year's Governor's Cup Walleye Fishing Tournament, for instance, nearly 1,000 fish went to the needy.

Most of the cleaning is done by local volunteers and members of sportsmen clubs.

Thousands of pheasants are also donated each year, often by those who are visiting the state and can't take home their kill.

Fowler maintains a steady drum beat of encouraging hunters to donate their game even though he knows the incentives to do so are diminishing. He notes that in earlier times processors weren't hard to find, but now a hunter may have to drive some distance to the nearest facility.

"It used to be more convenient for hunters when you didn't have to drive across the state to find a processor, but people are still hungry," he said.

Fowler said his work can often be challenging, but he stays motivated by remembering that there's always a need.

"There are so many families in our state that struggle and they need help," he said. "It all comes down to a warm, fuzzy thing for me. The work is a little more than I first anticipated but I can't just ignore it when I see an opportunity to help someone who needs it. We get a lot of positive feedback from our processors and the people we help are very grateful."
